Top 4 Globally Famous Japanese Advertisements. Updated June 23, 2017 | Japanese Commercials. www.youtube.com. Japan is one of the top countries spending the most on advertising, with countless ads rolling out every day. As you can imagine, it's also one of the most competitive markets, as Japanese advertisers strive to be very creative.

Sendai seems to have a theme of promoting foods with strange textures. On the opposite end of the crunchy spectrum is shirako, an incredibly creamy dish that looks like brains, but, in reality, comes from the other end of the body. During my time in the region, I was offered this dish three times, and I made it a point to try it thrice because the methods of preparation were slightly different ...

At night, we went to an amazing local izakaya (Japanese-style pub) that specializes in seafood and fish you can cook on a small charcoal grill. This style of cooking is called robata-yaki (焼物) or simply robata. As we walked into Tsuda Sengyo-ten, we could feel the spirit of Sendai from all the patrons there. The place was buzzing with energy and chatting, as to be expected from a bar ...

Kinpira is a Japanese method of cooking by sauteing and simmering root vegetables. Lotus root, carrots, gobo (burdock root), bamboo shoots, and even hijiki (seaweed) and tofu are cooked this way and served in a sauce of soy and mirin. Tip: Kinpira is typically served as part of Japanese teishoku (a set menu), and is the contents of one of the myriad small bowls.
